

SAVE THE DATE

Book Launch of and Discussion on

Experimentalism and Sociology From Crisis to Experience

24 January, 18:00 - 19:30 CET

[Registration link \[1\]](#)

Zoom link

Author

Tanja Bogusz

Center for Sustainable Society Research, Hamburg University

Speakers

Karin Knorr-Cetina

O. Borchert Distinguished Service Professor, University of Chicago

Noortje Marres

Professor, Centre for Interdisciplinary Methodologies, University of Warwick

Hans-Jörg Rheinberger

Former Director, Max Planck Institute for the History of Science, Berlin

[1] anyone who registers will get the Zoom link and reminders automatically, and they can also select a view later option (recommended).

Has society become a “real-world laboratory”? Tanja Bogusz asks this question in her book as she traces back the experimentalist approach from early American pragmatism to contemporary world society. She recommends that sociology, as a discipline, transforms from a science of crisis towards an experimental science of experience, focusing on heterogeneous cooperation to overcome the epistemic disparities of our time. The speakers will discuss the book’s core ideas, as well as its impact on current global challenges.

Springer Nature is delighted to invite you to join the author and the internationally renowned panellists at this online event.